Artist Asking for Photographs

Candee Basford, a mom, advocate and emerging artist living in southern Ohio, is asking for digital photographs to include in a new series of art intended to celebrate people with Down syndrome and to challenge public attitudes toward diversity. She is inviting readers to submit scanned or photographed digital images of handprints of babies and toddlers who have Down syndrome. In particular, she would like images of the palm side of the hand, open and including all the fingers.

Candee's first series of paintings illustrated lessons learned with her daughter Katie. These paintings resulted in an awarding winning book called "We Dance Together, A Painted Essay about My Education with Katie" along with a series of exhibits and talks around the country. You can learn more about her art and work at www.CandeeBasford.com

If you would like to participate, send your digital photograph or scanned image as an email attachment to candee@bright.net or contact Candee for more information. Her phone number is 937.695.0169.
